Turks Show Evidences of Despair

Dont' Know what to Make of Treaty
Will Conference Break Up ?

LAUSANNE, Jan. 30.—Constructive influences are being brought to bear on the various delegations to the Near East Conference to reduce to a minimum the chances of a rupture of the Conference on Wednesday, when the Allied draft of the proposed treaty will be officially submitted to the Turks. Although the Allied front is still unbroken there are clear indications that France and Italy at least will not subscribe to any proceedings having the ring of an ultimatum. As for the Turks they are beginning to show evidence of despair. The treaty presented privately to them today contains many causes to which they are absolutely opposed, and many others inserted at the last minute which they say they are unable to understand. The Angora delegates have worked themselves to such a state they are now distrustful of anything and everything the Allies put forward. If the Ottoman delegation returns an answer on Wednesday which will permit of further negotiations on the most vital essential clauses, it seems likely the French and Italian delegations will be ready to remain in Lausanne for a limited period, even if Marquis Curzon adheres to his announced programme of leaving on Friday night. Lord Curzon's departure is deemed quite justified in view of the imperative demands calling him to London. A delicate situation exists at Lausanne, and all possibilities are liable to follow a brusque rupture of the conference. This is further emphasized by reports relating to the movement of troops and threatened troop movements. Turkey and Russia are alleged already to have signed a special accord whereby Russia would hasten to aid Turkey in event of resumption of hostilities and occupy Mesopotamia, wresting his disputed territory from the British. The Russians and Turks declared this report to be an invention.

GERMANS GET COAL SUPPLY FROM ENGLAND

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The reported purchase by Germany of two hundred thousand tons of Yorkshire, Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire steam coal is confirmed by the Grimsby coal market. The English coal is for shipment in the next three months and the total price is three hundred thousand pounds.

Only Wants Money
PARIS, Jan. 30.—French troops will remain in Ruhr as long as necessary to assure payment of reparations, but not a single day longer, was Premier Poincaré's answer to-day to reports that France was seeking to annex the Ruhr Valley.

LARGE ATTENDANCE FEATURED FIRST MEETING OF INSTITUTE OF BANKERS

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY SAT DOWN TO BANQUET

Auspiciously for the future success of the organization, the first fortnightly meeting of the Halifax Institute of Bankers was largely attended by the members at the Green Lantern last evening, says the Halifax Herald of the 26th. The meeting was in the form of a dinner, followed by an address by Dr. H. J. Stewart on "Educative Reading." Two hundred and fifty members of the staffs from the various banks in the city enjoyed the banquet of a double feast for the body and mind. The Halifax Institute was formally organized recently, with several aims in view, chiefly (1) for educational self-improvement of the members, (2) for orientation of practical questions in Banking, such as the Bank Act, and (3) for enhancing existence by social pastime. The president for the year is B. L. Mitchell, Manager of the Royal Bank of Canada.

The chairman of the meeting last night was the honorary president of the Halifax Institute of Bankers, Horace A. Flemming. At the head table, with President Mitchell, Secretary E. G. Grundy, Dr. Stewart and F. St. C. Harris. During the dinner, F. P. Quinn, assisted at the piano by Joe Mills, lead the singing with "O Canada," "Jingle Bells," and "Toast to Halifax" (to the tune of "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier"). Mr. Quinn sang in solo, with splendid and infectious verve. "The Veteran's Song" ("Long Live The King"), and was so roundly encored that he responded with a dainty Irish genrellit, "Dear Little Irish Girl."

The President, Mr. Mitchell, briefly explained the origin and purpose of the organizing of the Halifax Institute of Bankers and remarked his satisfaction in seeing the meeting so largely attended. The chairman prefaced his introduction of Dr. Stewart, as the speaker of the evening, with expressions of similar satisfaction at the attendance, observing that it augured well for the future success of the Institute, and that the organization gave signal opportunities to the young men and ladies who are members to improve themselves intellectually and socially—an opportunity that did not exist in Halifax when he was a young bank clerk.

Dr. Stewart, at the outset signalled the distinction between an educated man and an uneducated man by observing that the purpose of education was the perfecting of the mind in flexibility, receptivity, elasticity, and that educative reading (literature) is the reading that nourishes and develops the mind in elasticity and receptiveness. Many persons read too much and get mental dyspepsia; others read the wrong books—the little books and not the great "one hundred best books;" and others fail to correlate, systematize, and thus assimilate their various readings.

He recommended five fields of reading—books of science, books on social problems, historical works, biographies, and books of style. But he thought that all reading should be conducted according to a hierarchy of

Ruhr Valley Isolated!

Railroad Strike and Postal Service Crippled

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Ruhr Valley is virtually isolated, communication for the most part is cut off and censorship has been established. Berlin is out of touch with Essen and other Rhineland points. The railroad strike is in full swing and the postal service is badly crippled. French authorities are engaged in systematic arrest and expulsion of German officials, state, and municipal, who refuse to obey orders. A number of papers on occupied territory have been suspended. British parliamentary party wants Parliament to convene earlier than February 13, so that the situation arising out of Franco-Belgian occupation of Ruhr may be given full consideration.

Synopsis of Treaty Presented to Turks Mosul Not Staked Off

MOUNT CLEMENS, MICH., Jan. 30.—Unconscious from cold Lieutenant Summers, aerial pilot at Selfridge Field, fell from an altitude of nineteen thousand feet to within four hundred feet of the ground, a drop of nearly four miles, before recovering senses. He righted the plane and made a safe landing.

LAUSANNE, Jan. 30.—The draft treaty which the allies will submit for Turkish signature Wednesday bears the caption "Project of Treaty Peace," thereby bearing evidence the document is not necessarily definitive. Contracting parties are Turkey, on the one part, and Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Rumania, and Yugoslavia on the other. It provided that for the next five years at least Turkey will organize a corps of legal advisers. The Turk Government will appoint commission composed of two Turks, three Justices of Hague Tribunal which will submit a list of foreign advisers. These will be attached to Ministry of Justice and assigned to service in Turkish courts of appeal in Cassadon. Arrests in large cities can be made values—according to one's bent and intellectual development; yet one must not avoid reading at times difficult books, so long as they are just above one and not too far above. He closed with two pieces of advice, telling his audience, first, to select some great writer in a certain field, first class writer, and spend days and nights with his works; secondly, to read as he phrased it, "fierce, hot controversial writings," of which in Canada familiar examples were the controversies that appear in the Antigonish Casket and the Toronto Orange Sentinel.

A vote of thanks, moved by F. St. C. Harris, was carried unanimously, and conveyed to the speaker by the chairman. The thanks of the meeting were also tendered to Mr. Quinn. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

(Mr. Mitchell will be remembered by our readers, as the popular Manager of the Royal Bank here for some years. He married Miss Elleen Baird, daughter of Mr. J. C. Baird of this city. Mr. Mitchell's numerous friends in Newfoundland join in congratulating him on the honor that has been done him by his associates in the banking world.)

only by permit from legal advisers and foreigners arrested elsewhere, or without permit from advisers can demand to be brought before advisers for hearing. Mosul problem treated in few words providing frontier between Turkey and Iraq to be determined in accordance with decision of League of Nations Council. The project for convention for administration of Straits is a separate document stipulating Straits control commission which may include representative of United States when latter adheres to Strait Treaty. Treaty fixes entire frontier of Turkey except Mosul. It gives Eastern Thrace to Turkey.

DUBLIN, Jan. 30.—Bombs were thrown at City Hall and Central Telephone Exchanges last evening. Many fires followed and one house blown up by mine.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Saturated market in liquor trade and cut rate war said to have been responsible for rapid dwindling of smuggling fleet of New York. Indications are that rum ships have moved to Massachusetts and Rhode Island coast vicinity of Boston, Newport, Nantucket and Narragansett pier. Arrival of steamer off Jersey with thirty three thousand cases of liquor set up such great competition that smaller operators were forced to seek other grounds.

CORK, Jan. 30.—Managers of local theatres and motion picture houses were ordered by republicans to close their places of entertainment whenever executions take place. Government commander countered with in order that anyone obeying republican mandate would be arrested on charge of aiding irregulars.

DUESSELDORF, Jan. 30.—Attempt to wreck train carrying General Weygans and French Minister en route from Paris to Duesseldorf. Wrecking signal boxes and obstructing traffic among the acts of sabotage coming to attention of occupation officials in Ruhr. Anticipated that solid customs ring be placed around Ruhr Valley thus preventing coal shipments into Germany hitherto not prevented.

HALIFAX, Jan. 30.—Controversy arisen between owners of barkentine Maid of England and owners of Manchester Shipper which brought disabled barkentine into port yesterday after strenuous fight with elements since Friday last. Commander Manchester Shipper claims Maid of England as property of his ship as Captain Oickle of barkentine left his ship and went aboard the Shipper, leaving his own craft to be officered from steamer towing it. Captain Oickle claims he was not allowed to return to his ship with salvage crew. Fred Clark of Channel Islands lost his life in getting line to ship and pilot J. H. Davis of Baltimore, passenger on Maid of England, had his rib broken.

The Cunard Line publicity department is responsible for the following, attributed to Bart Kennedy, chief deck steward of the steamship Aquitania.

One morning before 7 o'clock a second class passenger climber over the rail to the first class promenade deck and indulged in some lively walking and fancy callisthenics. A sailor was scrubbing the deck and feeling that he should not permit the rules of the ship to be broken even at that early hour intercepted the passenger and asked:

"Are you first class, sir?"
The passenger laid his hands on the sailor's shoulders and replied:
"I never felt better in my life."

CHAPTER XII...

An Evening At Shaddeck Light.

"Oh!" she cried, in a voice full of impatient pain. "how horrid it all is: the city and the noise and the ugliness and the dreary old round of lessons over and over, forever and ever."

He looked at her in pity. She was such a child, it was like caging a poor little forlorn starling, this cooping her up with schoolbooks and blackboards.

"What a shame!" he said. "I wish I could take you with me to Central America. You would like that, wouldn't you, Vera?" Like it? Her eyes flashed with quick delight. She laughed, then sighed. "And Flossy and Lex," he went on, "who are they? My lady's pair of pet poodles?"

"Oodles!" indignantly; "they are Alexis and Flossilla Trafton, nine and eight years old, and two of the nicest little things. I suppose it is wicked of me to be discontented. Mrs. Trafton is ever so good to me, and the children love me; but I ought to be at school myself. I know nothing at all. You see, it all happened when I was so young—only ten, Captain Dick, lifting two pathetic young eyes.

"Yes, dear," he said tenderly, "tell me about it. You lost your father, I know."

"I was twelve when papa died. He was killed in the second year of the war. Dot was over twenty then—she is only my half sister, you know."

"By the bye," said the captain, struck by a sudden thought, "what is your name, Vera? Not Lightwood, I know. Curious, that in all this time I have never heard your name."

"My father was a Cuban," Vera answered, "his name was Martinez—Manuel Salvador Martinez. I was christened after his mother, Veronica Mary."

"Veronica Mary. Then I have the honour of addressing the Dona Veronica Maria Martinez?"

Vera nodded.

"I am Vera to everybody, and all who know Dot call me Vera Lightwood. My grandmother Martinez lives in Cuba yet, and they say she is very rich. She was angry with papa for marrying mamma, and never would speak to him, or write to him after. When he died, she wrote for the first time—such a cold, proud letter—offering to take me. Mamma had lost her fortune through unfortunate speculation."

"So your mother would not let you go to Grandmamma Martinez and the Ever-faithful Isle?"

"No, but I think if she had known she was to die so soon, she would. We were left so poor, so desolate, so utterly alone."

"She died suddenly?"

"It was heart disease," she replied, after a moment, during which she had covered her face, with a sob, "and—Dot would not like me to tell this—she will not talk of it, nor think of it, but she has it, too. It is hereditary in her mother's family, and some day I am afraid—"

She stopped: her large eyes looked larger and blacker, French thought, than he had ever thought them before.

"I would die, I think, if anything happened to Dot. I have nobody but her in the world. Captain Dick, you know so much, do you think—do you think Dot will ever go like that?"

"I think not, I hope not, I am sure not," he answered, "my poor little Vera!"

He was so sorry for her, she was such a childish little soul to be thrown on the world, to fight its bitter battles. He had never had a sister, never thought whether he wished for one before; but he wished now that this little girl with the dark, appealing eyes, and winsome, innocent ways, were his sister.

"Then," went on Vera, "we were all alone, and homeless and poor. Only for Miss Scudder, an old-maid cousin of mamma's, who kept our house, I don't know what would have become of us."

She broke off. A great flash of lightning blazed out, followed by a dull, roaring cannonade. The storm was upon them in its might. She shrank and covered his eyes.

"Don't be afraid," Dick said reassuringly. "What! Such a little heroine frightened by a thunderstorm? Come, sit with your back to the window, and go on. You do not know how interested I am."

The crash was over; it was so dark they could hardly see each other's faces. Captain French took her two hands in one of his, and held them fast.

"Now," he said cheerily, "no: all the powers of earth and air, not all the king's horses, nor all the king's men, shall harm you. What next? What did you and Dot do then?"

"When mamma died, Dot wrote to Miss Scudder, asking her to help us. She wrote back at once, the kindest letter. She had married, during those four years, a very rich banker, a Mr. Trafton, and she invited us to her house, and inclosed money to pay our way. Now, was that not kind?"

"Very kind. The world is not such a bad sort of place after all as the cynics try to make it out. Now, now, never mind the lightning."

"But it is so awful. Captain Dick, what would we do if it struck this house and set it on fire?"

"It won't strike," laughed, "I am a nonconductor. Well, you went to Mrs. Trafton's?"

"We went to Mrs. Trafton's and nobody could have been kinder. Mr. Trafton had been a widower, and Lex and Flossy were two little tots no bigger than that, but they took the greatest fancy to me at once you can't think!"

"Can't it? It has been exactly my own case. I stood on the bank, that morning, and looked down on the dearest little black-eyed fairy in the world, and fell in love with her on the spot."

"Now, you are laughing at me. If you are making—"

"I am perfectly serious. My case and that of Lex and Flossy are precisely parallel."

"Well, whether you are laughing or not, they did, and Mrs. Trafton proposed that I should stay, partly as playmate, partly as governess, at a small salary. Such a ridiculous governess. Captain Dick, only fourteen!"

"And there you are ever since?"

"Ever since, and likely to be, until the children are old enough for a governess who knows something. I know nothing, nothing," said Vera, with a melancholy little shake of the head.

"What becomes of Dona Martinez then?"

"Ah, what? Goodness knows. I have a talent for cooking; I might go out as kitchenmaid. I suppose Mrs. Trafton will get something for me; she is awfully good. But I do hate teaching."

"You poor little soul!" Captain French was aware that he had several times already used this form of consolation, and that it would be well to vary it, but it seemed to fit the case as well as anything else.

"And Dot hates millinery; I mean she hates being a lay figure, and trying on, and showing things to vulgar rich people, who would be insolent if they could, only Dot never takes airs nor insolence from anybody. But it is a stupid life all round, and in the long, hot summertime, and the dull winter days— But there! what is the use of talking about it? Poor we are, and poor we will be till the end of the chapter. Sometimes I wish Mr. Charlton had not invited us here. It makes the going back so much worse."

"I wish that Mr. Charlton would keep you for good. I would be a capital arrangement on both sides. If things were as they used to be between us, I would ask him. Ah, by Jove, that was a crash!"

A crash, indeed. It shook the light house, the rocks under it, the mighty ocean itself. And then a blaze of blue sulphurous light zigzagged through the room, and Vera screamed and buried her face on his shoulder. He drew her close, and did his best to soothe her, but he could feel her quivering with fear.

"It will not hurt you, you are perfectly safe. Vera, why, you poor child, how your heart is beating! How sorry I am you came."

That roused her a little.

"I—I am not sorry," she gasped, "it would be just as bad over at the house. Oh, Captain Dick, I am always frightened to death in thunderstorms. Do you—do you think it will soon be over?"

"It will be over in fifteen minutes," returned Captain Dick, in the positive tone of one who always had his information from headquarters, "and meantime, neither the thunders, nor the lightning, nor twice the hurly, hurly will harm us. Hark! there is the rain. It is only a summer shower after all. Our cyclone will be over in a moment now."

And in a very few minutes it was over. There was a torrent of rain, a few more vivid flashes, a few more rumbling peals, and then the spirit of the storm drew off his forces, growling sullenly as he went. There was but the furious pour of the rain, and as Vera did not fear that, she lifted her diminished head, and, rather ashamed of herself, looked in a somewhat crestfallen fashion at her companion.

"What a goose you must think me, Captain Dick. But I can't help it. I have always been like this. I wonder, suddenly, 'what keeps Daddy?'"

"The storm, I suppose. He doesn't like wetting any more than his betters."

"And the tide is turning!" cried the girl going to the window! "It must be nien o'clock. Captain Dick, the tide is turning."

"Let it turn. What is the tide to you and me?"

"But how am I to get off? How am I to go home?"

"Daddy will fetch you. He will come off in a boat presently, and then, after supper, can row you ashore. Come, don't grow anxious, it will be all right."

"Well—if you think so—you are sure Daddy will come?"

"Quite certain."

"Because if he did not, you know, I could walk it. The bar is still clear—"

"And the rain is still pouring in bucketfuls. Yes, it is so likely I will let you walk. I'll tell you what you may do, little Vera; does my memory serve me, or did I dream you owned to a genius for cooking?"

"I own to it. It is my one talent."

"And you are not afraid of blackening your hands?"

"Not a bit. Nature has made them so black that art nor soot cannot spoil them."

"Very well, then. Yonder is the kitchen. In the kitchen is a stove, in the stove is a fire, left by forebanded Daddy. On sundry shelves are various articles of tin and crockery appertaining to the cuisine. In different canisters are coffee, tea, milk, etcetera. Now, suppose while we wait, you get up your supper. I am considerably hungry. And if you prove to have the culinary skill you claim, when I return from Central America, with my fortune made, I may engage you as my cook."

Vera needed no second bidding. She went to the kitchen in high glee. The invalid proposed accompanying

St. Brendan's.

Editor Evening Advocate.

Dear Sir.—Please grant me space in your most valuable paper, the Advocate, to make a few remarks about our meeting, which was held here on Dec. 22nd by Mr. Winsor and Mr. Boone.

It was late in the afternoon when they arrived; soon the flags went up and everyone was astir.

At half past seven the meeting opened with a packed hall. Mr. Winsor was the first speaker. He spoke for a half hour or more, and was given a grand hearing.

After Mr. Winsor was done he introduced Mr. Boone, who immediately took the platform, and for two hours or more he outlined the educational and industrial needs of Newfoundland, and what we want to make our island home prosper. You could hear a pin drop while he was speaking, showing what attention his audience was giving.

After the public meeting was over a Union meeting was held, and a good time was spent. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

The next morning we bid adieu to our two friends as they were leaving for Gooseberry Island.

I noticed by the papers that Morine was getting obnoxious about the Trading Company dividends, and that he was going to collect in cash. He had better beware, it ought to soothe his feelings to look at the Evening Advocate of the 14th and see the answer of so many of the shareholders and their answer to him. Hands off, Morine! the Trading Company can very well do its business without such a hot head as Morine to interfere. You are like the label on the jam crock, not in it. You are only on it, and that will be the way you will be if you come for election this. You surely will be at the bottom of the Poll.

We are having a frosty winter, with

Plenty of Work, Fairly Good Pay, Says Hare Bay

Hare Bay, Jan. 23, 1923

To the Editor Evening Advocate.

Dear Sir.—While reading the Advocate and seeing reports from all other places, I thought a word from this place would not be amiss. Although we never got a visit from Mr. Boone and R. G. Winsor this Fall, it does not take any of the Union spirit out of us. We are still standing by the Union and its President. The reason why is that we think he is our only trust at this hour of struggle. Times are brightening up a lot this year. There is plenty of work and fairly good pay, so we can't go hungry. We are having a fairly good winter for lumbering, also building boats. Everyone has a job and plenty to eat, and what do we want to grumble for? We say: Go ahead Mr. Coaker with your good work, we are at your back.

A word for R. G. Winsor. We believe he has done his very best for his district in helping the poor. We congratulate him. Come again, you are sure, also J. Abbott. He has done his very best, too. Don't mind the Opposition crowd. We are not asleep. Next Fall when the ballots are counted, that's the time to talk! We have read a lot about the Jesse Winsor-Morine movement, but it don't go far in the heads of the people. Some people say there are no Union men to-day, but they are like the ants, strike the nest and out they will come until you can't count them.

Where is Aunt Jane, Mr. Editor, is she dead? She should be on the move now. We say again, Coaker Winsor and Abbott were the best three men ever elected for Bonaville District, and they can't lose. Thanking you for space.

Yours sincerely,
HONEST WORKER.

THEY ARE WORTH THEIR WEIGHT IN GOLD

NEW BRUNSWICK MAN CANNOT SAY TOO MUCH IN FAVOUR OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

He Advises All Persons who Suffer from Kidney Disease to use them. Pine Ridge, N.B., Jan. 29 (Special).—From all over New Brunswick reports are coming telling of the popularity of Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for all forms of kidney trouble.

In every place, however small, there appears to be at least one person who is prepared to say that he owes his health to the great Canadian remedy. Mr. Edward Chandler, a well-known resident here is one of them.

"I have taken ten boxes of your Dodd's Kidney Pills and cannot say too much in their favour," Mr. Chandler states. "They are worth their weight in gold and I shall advise all who suffer from kidney disease to use them."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have become a family remedy because people have tried them and found them good. They help Rheumatism, Lumbago, Diabetes, Lamé Back, Heart Disease and Urinary troubles, because all of these are either Kidney Diseases or are caused by the kidneys failing to do their work.

Comfort Cove Gives Packed Hall to Delegates

(To the Editor)

Dear Sir.—I now take advantage of the time to write another short epistle to your paper, the Advocate. Everything seems to be going first rate around here now, most all our people are engaged in cutting up props. Some of our men camp at night for the week and come home on Saturday. One would think this afternoon by the enthusiasm of the people that something big was going to happen. I began to enquire what was up, and they told me that the Union travelling delegate was here and that he was going to lecture in the Union hall. I hurried off to the hall as soon as possible and sure enough Mr. Boone was speaking to a packed hall. After some difficulty I secured a seat on the floor. Everyone listened attentively to Mr. Boone while he outlined the possibilities of the Humber Valley and what it would mean to Newfoundland. He also spoke on the most urgent need of the country, the education of our children, and the exportation of our codfish, which is the main industry. Mr. Boone got a splendid reception here. After his address the audience gave him a hearty clap and vote of thanks, and after singing the National Anthem the public meeting closed. The Union members remained behind for a brief discussion on several important matters. I will finish by wishing Mr. Boone and our members a successful new year.

Yours truly,

W. W. HALL.

MOTHER! MOVE! CHILD'S BOWELS

"California Fig Syrup" is Child's Best Laxative

Hurry mother! Even a cross, sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

MISSION OPENS AT ST. THOMAS'S

BISHOP MOWLL PREACHES.

The noble strains of "All People that on Earth do Dwell" was a fitting opening last night to the first service of the Mission being conducted by Bishop Mowll at St. Thomas's Church, which proved alike impressive and inspiring. The old church was filled with an expectant and reverent congregation, which included a number of the city clergy, amongst the latter in the chancel being the Bishop of Newfoundland, Canons Bolt, Netten, Field, Jeeves and Rev. E. Nichols.

The opening devotions were conducted by the Rector, Rev. E. C. Earp, and the lesson, the parables of the Lost Sheep and the Lost Coin, were read by Canon Jeeves, rector of the Cathedral.

Following the second hymn, Bishop White, in the name of the Diocese of Newfoundland and the parish of St. Thomas's, extended a warm welcome to the visiting Bishop and Missioner, saying that while Bishop Mowll had probably discovered that coming to this Colony in winter time was not unattended with delay and difficulty, he hoped it might be said reverently that "the heaven where he would be" had been reached. His Lordship expressed the hope that the Mission would result in much good, not only to the parish of St. Thomas's, but to the diocese as well. He was sure that the result which would come nearest the Bishop's desire would be that some lads may be brought to the point of volunteering to follow Bishop Mowll in taking up work for the Master in China.

Bishop White then offered up special prayer for Bishop Mowll's Mission, after which he gave his personal blessing to the Bishop, who knelt before him, making a fitting commencement to the work of the week.

Bishop Mowll then ascended the pulpit and thanked the Bishop, his brother clergy and the people for their warm welcome, hoping that the week spent together would be abundantly blessed and God glorified.

The Bishop is a man of strong virile personality. Of more than ordinary height, almost massive frame, he looks a true exponent of the "Strong Arm of the Lord." With few body motions as he speaks, there is a directness and simplicity that make their own appeal. He gives the impression that he goes straight to the point and leaves the elaboration to his hearers.

His Lordship announced as his text the words from Rev. 22-4: "and they shall see His face; and His name shall be in their foreheads." He took another few words as a complement: "Go wash thy face."

The face is the index of the character. What a man was written on his face. Though there are millions of faces yet each has some distinctive character all its own, and we know each other by our faces.

He gave illustrations of different faces presented in the Bible, drawing lessons aptly and forcefully from each. First "The Painted Face" of Jezebel, that wicked woman, who was selfish and who slew men for her own vanity. Next "The Sad Face" of Job, that man who was trying to puzzle out the mystery of his suffering.

Then "The Hard Face" of Ezekiel, The Self Righteous Face of the Pharisee, all finding their prototypes in our day.

Then "The Marred-Face" of the Christ, who was "marred more than any one by suffering and agony of bloody sweat. "The Purposeful Face" of the Christ showing definiteness in aiming at the good and not being turned from the path.

And last "The Transfigured Face" of Stephen, whose face shone as it were the face of an angel, the face of one who gets the vision of sins forgiven, and a foretaste of the blessedness which rewards a life well lived.

Immediately after the sermon, the congregation sang a hymn kneeling, and with the announcement of the continuation of the Mission tonight at 8, the service closed with the Benediction by Bishop White.

We also join with St. Thomas's in extending a hearty welcome to Bishop Mowll who has diverted his journey in this uncertain weather to come to Newfoundland before he goes to his parish of 62 million souls in Western China. That his Mission will be a fruitful one goes without saying, as no effort for good can possibly be without effect.

Lewisporte Has Big Meeting

(To the Editor)

Dear Sir.—Just a word to say that we had a visit from Mr. Boone, the Travelling Delegate. Mr. Boone lectured in the Orange Hall to a fine audience of his own town folk, and I believe all his hearers went away fully persuaded that the speaker had done well with the educational and industrial subjects discussed. Some one said last year when Mr. Boone decided to give some of his time travelling in the interest of the toilers that he had given up Christ for Coaker. Mr. Editor it is a pity that we are so narrow and so quick to condemn a fellow just because he may differ from what we think. If Mr. Boone or any good and true Newfoundlander who has gone away from his native land and saw conditions as they exist, wishes to sacrifice his time and energy telling us how we may improve dear old Terra Nova we ought to praise him. Go ahead, Mr. Boone, hundreds of our countrymen believe in you, and when the time comes every man will get his reward. Never was there a time when we needed good and true men as we do today and we are going to trust Sir R. A. Squires and Hon. W. F. Coaker before we will the man from Nova Scotia, who has got gall enough to tell us that he will come back and work for nothing. Mr. Editor, if the dear old man promised to work for the remainder of his days for nothing there is a very large number that would not trust him. Once bitten, twice shy. Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor.

Yours truly,
PROGRESS.

OBITUARY

Editor Evening Advocate.

Dear Sir.—Please allow me space to record the death of Elizabeth White, beloved wife of Robert White, who died Jan. 20th, 1923. Her passing was indeed a sad one, especially to her husband and children, and also to her friends, which are many. She was only sick one month, but yet was waiting and longing for God to call her to that bright home where sickness and pain is no more. We miss her greatly in our midst, but while we regret our loss yet be believe she lives with him whom she served. Left to mourn are a husband, and 3 sons and 4 daughters. Two sons and a daughter are at New York, one daughter staying with her aunt at Keels. One son and two daughters are at home, also three sisters and four brothers. She was laid to rest on Monday, Jan. 22nd, in the Methodist cemetery by Rev. G. Johnston.

Thou art gone to the grave, but we will not deplore thee, Though sorrows and darkness encompass the tomb. Thy Saviour has passed through its portals before thee, And the lamp of His love is thy guide through the gloom.

God in His wisdom has recalled The one we loved so dear, To rest with Him in peace above, Tho' we are mourning here. Inserted by Mrs. A. J. White and Mrs. E. T. White Princeton, Jan. 25, 1923.

As a new coloured preacher of the Negro church was passing one morning he leaned over the fence to admire Sam Hill's flowers. "Sam," he said, "I understand you have a white poppy." "No, sah," he said, emphatically, "you are hearing 'bout Samuel Johnson. My daddy's black as de ace 'o spades."

Cascarets never stir you up or gripe like Salts, Pills, Calomel, or Oil and they cost only ten cents a box. Children love Cascarets too.

Heavy Loss Is Sustained By West End Fire

Two Stores Are Gutted by Blaze of Unknown Origin

Fire of unknown origin completely shooting through the roof of one of the stores of W. J. Sharpe and building and coming through the windows of the other, the firemen had a big proposition to face. Fortunately at 6.45 p.m. in the Sharpe premises, the a staunch brick wall separated the Allan residence west of the burning buildings, while a small passageway that served as a fire break ran between the Springdale House on the eastern side.

Despite the splendid efforts of the firemen, the interior of the two stores became enveloped in the flames, destroying the whole contents of Sharpe's store and all the contents of the upper portion of Walsh's.

How the fire originated is a mystery, as when Mr. Sharpe left at closing time, everything was in order and he is certain there was no fire in the building. The loss is very great as on the entire property including both buildings and stock there is only $6,500 insurance carried. Mr. Sharpe having $3000 on his stock, while Mr. Walsh has only $1500 on the two buildings, and $2000 on his stock. At the Springdale House, conducted by Mrs. P. Walsh, some damage was caused by water, but not to any great extent.

The building occupied by Mr. Sharpe is owned by Mr. Walsh also, and only the ground flat is used by Mr. Sharpe, the remaining portion of the premises being included in the Walsh establishment, from which access may be gained. There was little, therefore, to stop the fire from getting into the adjoining grocery and feed store, and with the flames

M. G. C. SING-SONG

The second sing-song arranged by the ladies auxiliary took place at the M.G.C.'s rooms Sunday night from 8.30 to 9.30 and was very largely attended, the rooms being filled almost to capacity. The boys appreciate this effort of the ladies and show it by turning out in large numbers.

Mr. L. C. Mays, one of the old guards, who often led the boys to victory at the rifle range in days gone by, sang a solo in excellent voice with good effect, whilst his good lady contributed a very appropriate recitation entitled "The land of beginning again." Miss Russell sang a solo in her usual acceptable manner, and also sang with Miss Brown in a very pleasing duet. Mrs. C. H. Butt presided at the piano and Mr. S. J. Tucker acted as chairman. These free and easy informal gatherings are calculated to do a great deal of good in the way of getting people better acquainted with each other.

They are an experiment for the winter Sabbath evenings, and will continue just so long through the winter as the boys themselves show by their attendance that they really want them. So far they have assisted very emphatically.

Premier Squires Gets Mines Started Satisfactory Negotiations Proceeding

(Special to The Advocate)

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 30.—Premier has arranged practically finalized for resumption of operations at Wabana next week on a scale sufficient to take care acute cases of distress, pending final arrangement for continuous operations with former scale. Situation bristle with difficulties, but present stage of negotiations indicates satisfactory outcome.

The Scent of Battle!

At stated periods, especially the years of election, some who are very bitterly opposed to the F. P. U. try to stir up a little scare against that organization. Success has one drawback in that it puts a feeling of jealousy and prejudice in those who either cannot share in that Success, or who do not favor those who came to that Success. Thus it is that the more successful the F. P. U. becomes, the more does it irritate those who have been disappointedly looking for its failure. Before 1913 it was arranged that Mr. Coaker and his F. P. U. should be driven from the political arena, which they seemed to be invading. It was more than a nine days' wonder when the result of the 1913 election showed a solid North for Mr. Coaker's party. It was then decided that the F. P. U. had a good deal of strength, and efforts should be made to thoroughly undermine the Union and the Companies which were being established. It is not too much to say that the brightest political minds of the country were asked to contribute to the campaign which would discredit the F. P. U. and its Leader. This campaign proceeded on duly authorized lines until it was felt that not only was the F. P. U. an undesirable force but that alliance with it was tantamount to certain defeat.

In election of 1919 brought in Mr. Coaker and those allied with him with the greatest number of votes ever polled and the most wonderful majorities in the whole history of political fights. The party with which they were associated came into power and yet nothing has happened to fulfil the dire predictions of those who cried "wolf."

Once again election year has come and again are gathered the enemies of the F. P. U. The idea this year is to have real fishermen spreading strange ideas and notions in the districts where the Union is strong. There is not the slightest shadow of belief in the minds of these men that they can affect these districts politically, but they would like to persuade others that they can. When we say that their venture is going to be a veritable "will o' the wisp," we know it to be so because of the reports which continue to pour in upon us.

The scent of battle is sufficient to make F. P. U. Councils stronger than ever, and the spur of even a weak opposition movement is making the fishermen eager for the title of the ballots. We have published many reports showing large increases of membership, some doubling their numbers, and the padded messages and letters of their opponents cannot be taken at their face value.

When an election comes, it will find the fishermen ready to back the Government which has, through the time of depression, spared no effort to find work and food for those who were hard hit.

What Newfoundland Might be Fifty Years Hence!

A Glimpse at Things in General as They Might be in the Future in this Country

A NEW NEWFOUNDLAND.

For several weeks I roamed around from one outport to another, and many were the things I saw that fascinated me. It was indeed a new Newfoundland that had developed. I cannot go into detail here sufficiently to tell everything that I saw—that would take too much space and time. I can only give the salient and outstanding points.

There was one thing common to all the outports and settlements—they were distinctly more modern and represented a much higher plane of living than had the old ones of my own day. Every outport was now electrically lighted, and in most of them the houses were electrically heated. Newfoundland had harnessed her white coal. There was a library in every outport, and these were liberally patronized, too. Of course the libraries, being public, were quite free. You could go to the library and either read while there, or borrow any number of books up to three and take them home for two weeks. Everything was checked, of course. Each library had foreign papers and magazines coming from different countries. People were thus enabled to keep in touch with things that transpired in the different parts of the world. They evinced, I discovered, a lively interest in such matters. Their interest was intensified when travelling lecturers gave dissertations on those matters among others. From observation I found that this love of reading and investigation and speculation into various questions not absolutely connected with their every day life, was the result of the new system of education that had been introduced into the country. This system consisted, largely, in giving each pupil a love for reading and investigation, so that when he left school he continued his reading and studying.

"The trouble with the old system," explained a teacher to me, "was that it took a boy or a girl and taught him or her certain things—how to read, write and do a little arithmetic. In reality, they pumped a certain amount of learning into the pupils. It was not done scientifically, because the teachers had not been trained to do it that way. The result was, of course, that pupils generally disliked school and learning, and when they left school they promptly forgot all they had learned because they did not follow it up. Now we regard school days as only a period in which we lay the foundation for the real education of each citizen. We endeavor to instill into each pupil a love for learning, and teach him the right way to read, and use his brains.

May the Premier's Mission Succeed

With its characteristic unfairness and political hydrophobia the Daily News continues to attack the Prime Minister, whose absence from the Colony at the present juncture is made necessary in the interests of nearly two thousand men, laborers at Bell Island, recently thrown out of work. Realizing that the quickest and probably the only way in which practical results may be obtained, Sir Richard Squires, because he is true to the office which he so capably fills, determined upon his present course of action. At this season of the year it would be much more comfortable for the Prime Minister to remain in St. John's, and were he giving thought to his personal or political aims, it is a certainty that he would find him conducting negotiations over the Bell Island affair from his comfortable quarters here in St. John's. Travelling along the Atlantic seaboard at this season of the year is not to be regarded as a picnic, nor do sensible people consider this period of the year a time for pleasurable excursions to Montreal. This stale bait of Tory manufacture has become so copiously nibbled day in and day out, that the public are now looking for some new form of nettles with which to flog the into that hopelessly disorganized, and disrupted Tory following. Newfoundland, since the days of responsible government, has had no more hard working statesman at the helm of Government than Sir Richard Squires. Only a sneering end will

By J.R.S.

"What is the result? Well, you see it about you everywhere. The men and women of this country are thinking people—the fisherman is a thinking fisherman, and the farmer is a thinking farmer. They no longer do things in the way their forefathers did them simply because their forefathers did them that way. They think about their work, and see how they can do it better and more efficiently. We have turned the people into amateur scientists, ever on the alert for improvement and progress. We have accomplished a complete revolution in our method of thinking."

This teacher was an interesting sort of fellow. He was very much an enthusiast, and obviously loved his work—or, as he called it, "his art." He regarded himself as an artist, as a painter or a poet might so regard himself. He read magazines devoted to the art of teaching, and such subjects as psychology were as commonplace to him as any of the everyday subjects. He was well paid, had an excellent standing in the community, was looked up to, and in the councils of town meetings, etc., was consulted for his opinion. A revolution in the status of the teacher had indeed taken place.

Teachers were now systematically trained before they were permitted to teach. They underwent regular courses of instruction, and passed series of examinations. In different grades they were sent to schools for a period of practical training, then returned to the training school to sit for further examinations, and so up the line. The higher the examinations passed the higher their salary and the more honored they were. There was a fine incentive for teachers to study hard themselves and prepare themselves to pass successive examinations.

Each outport had its town hall, some small and some big, wherein were held different meetings, etc., as well as theatrical performances and motion pictures. The F.P.U. Council of each place had its offices in this hall, too. There was a debating club in every settlement, as well as clubs, etc. I saw more discussion, arguing, debating, etc., going on in any one of the outports than in the old days. I have seen in all the outports combined, in the old days, a lot of their leisure time spent in playing and dancing. Now they were just as industriously and enthusiastically devoted to reading and learning. Before, their conversation used to consist largely of things in the present, and of things connected with the fishery, or the family affairs, etc. They lived in a world of narrow confines. Now their outlook had widened, and wide enough to embrace things and subjects never even thought of in the old days. Why, I sat and chatted with groups of men in some of the outports and listened to them discuss subjects which, in the old days, few ever considered. I can tell you that I was delighted, the more I saw!

I asked an old fisherman—now "past his labor," as the saying is—the cause for all this change. He scratched his head and pondered for a minute.

"Well," he said, at last, slowly, "I think it is this way: in the old days, when I was a whippersnapper, as fishermen's thoughts and energy used to be taken up with the problem of getting a living. Mind you, that used to be a hard problem for us to solve. You have no idea of how hard it was. The price of fish in those days was not very good, and we had to work hard to be able to live at all. We could save only a scrap of money now and then for the old age. No matter how hard we tried, we couldn't seem to do more than make both ends meet. Some times we couldn't do that, and then we'd have to turn to the little bit of savings. It was a hard life, sir, and uncertain. That's it—'twas uncertain." He nodded his head. "So you see, I didn't have much heart for anything but getting a living. Even when I wasn't fishing we'd be thinking about next year's fishing, and wondering how we were going to do well in it. 'Twas an unpleasant life, I can tell you."

He was silent for a moment, looking morosely at the toes of his boots. The light brightened.

"But now," he said, smiling, "it's all different. We can make a living much more easily, and there isn't the old worry and torment about it, either. Everything is much better. We get good, steady prices for our fish, and we live as decent human beings should live. We give the children a good education, and we have lots of enjoyment. Not that I agree with everything they do and say nowadays, but you—don't you?" (For all his improvement I could easily see that the old man had a little of the old conversation of a typical fisherman about him.) "But on the whole, sir, things are a heck better. Life is not so hard, and it isn't the same worry to it. We have more time and more desire to devote to enjoying life."

This conversation, with several other similar ones I had had, as well as many things I had observed, had been framing a question in my mind. It was the question that had to do with everything I saw—it was a demand for the explanation of the whole business, the whole change and improvement. I determined to ask that question at the first opportunity. (To be continued.)

CARE BRETON STEEL WORKERS WILL ASK FOR CONCILIATION

SYDNEY, Jan. 22.—Sydney steel workers are to make an humble request for a conciliation board on rates of pay and working conditions at the Bescos mills here, Foreman Way. M. P. P., secretary of the union, announced to-day.

The men recently asked the company for an 8 hour day and wages increase of 15 per cent, bringing the minimum wage up to $3.35 per day. The company replied that it was unable to do this, hence the move for a board.

Because the steel mills are not a public utility, no compulsory board can be granted by the labor department. Such a tribunal can only be obtained by mutual consent of employers and employees, which does not seem likely in the present instance.

EMPIRE TRADE. (Natal Advertiser)

It is a strange thing for so progressive a people that they should have let so many years pass by, decade after decade, leaving neglected, or only very tentatively developed, those great possessions which, with great foresight and wisdom, have been placed in the hands of the British Crown. In the light of the experience gained during the war special steps are necessary to stimulate production, especially foodstuffs, within the Empire wherever production is possible and economically desirable, for the safety and welfare of the Empire as a whole.

Morine's Return

A Placentia Man's Conjecture—May it Not be Only Too True

To the Editor.

Dear Sir,—A couple of weeks ago I had something to say through your columns on the gall and impudence of men of Jesse Winsor's type undertaking to visit the Southern and Western sections of this Island for the purpose of creating political feeling favorable to A. B. Morine. I said at that time, that there was every sympathy with those Northern fishermen when they first came on to St. John's. It was believed by many, that their object was to get a better price for their fish; but it since turns out—the prime movers in the United Fishermen's cause were merely the pupils of Mr. Morine. His school of thought is not for us nor for the people of Placentia Bay. His cringing public appeal to Sir Michael Cashin, after he was literally lured out of the Star Hall meeting by Cashin, Croable, Higgins and Bennett is proof positive that the man hasn't the political spirit of a hen. Bonavista Bay pitched him in 1919. The great body of Northern fishermen are now, as then, in complete accord with their brothers of Placentia Bay, when it calls for unity of action in preventing the return to public life in this country of A. B. Morine. His Tory associates realize this. I repeat that the Tory meeting of Opposition members held in the Star Theatre in this city on the night of November 19th, 1922, was for the principal purpose of dropping Morine; but Mr. Morine refused to be gouged out. Having held the misguided fishermen of Bonavista Bay here for nearly a month, to their great inconvenience, hardship and actual loss, they were obliged to shift for themselves, the rank and file, the tollers themselves were dumped aside, by the Skippers were dined at the King George Institute and future plans made to carry on this political agitation, which, if successful, might land them in jobs at Government expense. Mr. Morine, I understand, recently returned from Toronto, where he spent Xmas at home. In the interim it would appear that Sir John Croable has stolen his lines and intrigued on the side with Messrs. Jesse Winsor & Co. This arrangement, it is said, is very distasteful to Mr. Morine, and I notice in Saturday Telegram a letter signed A. B. Morine, which sounds and reads to me very Morineque. I think I know the man of Placentia Bay well enough to be able to tell A. B. Morine, that they would not touch him or anybody associated with him politically with a forty foot pole. The writer of the Telegram's letter goes out of his way to insult the Hon. Mr. Brownrigg. It is true that poor health has prevented Mr. Brownrigg from giving that valuable service which he is quite capable of rendering, despite the dirty insinuations of certain Tory scribblers. He may not be such a snarler as Mr. Morine thinks he is, but he can be trusted to do his country justice every time. There is room for more young men of the Brownrigg type in the public life of this country, while from a bitter experience, we have been taught to shun A. B. Morine and his political associates. The District of Bonavista—where he is best known—passed him over in 1919, and it is not likely that this evil genius of Torydom will ever again be allowed to enter the Legislature of Newfoundland.

Better off Here

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—"We haven't equal our wool; we can't get any, but we had to sit up all night to keep warm—my wife and I—with our heatless clothes on. We applied at the city hall and were told to try the dealers. What are we to do?" This was the pathetic query of a East End man this morning. It is one of the very many cases of actual suffering due to inability to procure fuel at any price.

Quickly Conquers Constipation

Don't let constipation poison your blood and curtail your energy. If your liver and bowels don't work properly, take CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS today and your trouble will cease. For dizziness, lack of appetite, headache and blotchy skin nothing can equal them. Purely vegetable. Small Pill—Small Dose—Small Price.

HELP FOR YOUNG WOMEN

Visiting. "From the time I was 15 years old I would not go to school. I was in the lower part of my station, I followed by camp and wandering. I just kept me from my work (I help my parents on the farm) as I usually had to go to bed for the rest of the day. Most times I would have to walk the road. I suffered in this way until a friend induced me to let Lydia, the wife of Volney Davis, take me to the hospital. The satisfactory results so far and the recommendation of the doctor are commending my friends. I am very thankful for it. I feel like a different person that I don't have to suffer."

Jan. 23, 1923.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir,—We are still doing our duty; we held our annual meeting Saturday night and elected our officers as follows:

John W. Dyke, Chairman.
Allan Brown, Deputy Chairman.
Martin Brown, Secretary.
Thomas Brown, Treasurer.

When we are called to mark our ballots we know who we are going to vote for. We hear that Johnny Croasbie is coming against Mr. Coaker in the next fight, but I believe that Johnny will be a wiser man when the ballots are counted. He does not know the Bonavista Bay men except a few of Jessa Winsor's type, and he is going to get left.

I remain,
Yours truly,
JOHN W. DYKE,
Chairman Salvage Local Council.

ETHEL HICKS

Dear Sir.—I regret to record the death of Ethel Blanche, daughter of Aquilla and Bertha Hicks, at the age of 18 years. In the Spring of 1921 she underwent an operation at St. Anthony, having a tubercular hand taken off, and from the effects of this operation she never fully recovered. During the past summer it seemed that her former health would be restored, but in the early Fall she contracted a cold which eventually caused her death. Ethel was of a very cheerful disposition, and from the earliest days of her illness her attitude was marked by cheerfulness. Death held no terrors for her, and the messenger found her peacefully awaiting the call. Her passing was such that must certainly bring hope and comfort to the bereaved ones. She was laid to rest on Sunday, Jan. 14th. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. J. Hillier, who preached from Job, 1st chap., latter part of 21st. verse.

The members of the Sunday School and Epworth League, to which she belonged, showed their respect by placing wreaths on the coffin, and preceded the hearse in funeral procession.

In the death of this young friend, we have another evidence of the uncertainty of life. May we who remain strive to live so that we too may be considered worthy to enter into the newer and better life which she now enjoys.

To the sorrowing friends we extend
Our heartfelt sympathy.
The light of smiles shall fill again
The lids that over-flow with tears,
And weary hours of woe and pain
Are promises of happier years.

K. W. P.

WORKMAN HAS FOOT CRUSHED

Robert Oliver, a car-man engaged in hauling rocks to the East End Crusher, was injured while at work this morning by a heavy piece of stone falling on his foot while he was unloading his car. The big toe was badly crushed and the foot otherwise bruised. He was brought to the police station, where he was attended by Dr. McDonald, who was summoned and after having the injured member dressed, he was taken to his home by his brother.

RAILWAY NEWS

As a result of the last storm on the West Coast, the railway line was again blocked, but is now being cleared by rotaries and a freight train crossed the Topsails to-day.

Owing to the uncertainty of weather conditions no passenger train will be despatched across country for the present, and the Kyle will keep up the Sydney-St. John's service for some time longer.

A local express will leave here at 1 o'clock, on Thursday, going as far as Millertown Junction.

FIREMAN INJURED

During the fire at W. J. Sharpe's store last evening, fireman William Baker of the Central station had his hand badly cut by a piece of glass falling from one of the windows of the building. He had to be attended by a doctor and after getting his injured hand dressed he proceeded to his home, being unable to continue work.

HELDER GOES ON DRY DOCK

The Norwegian grain steamer Helder, after discharging part of her cargo at the Furness Withy pier, went on dry dock yesterday for repairs to her damaged plates. The work is being done with all possible despatch and it is expected she will be ready to come off on Friday.

"FOR OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM."

A bright little life was tragically lost to the Better Land yesterday morning, when little Phyllis Kean, the four year old daughter of Capt. W. B. and Mrs. Kean, died after a particularly severe illness of some weeks. It was a form of meningitis, and hopes were held out that she would recover, but yesterday the little soul took its flight to the everlasting Arm of Him who said "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." He is the Good Shepherd indeed and is ever ready to take the little lambs to His bosom. Her parents and brother and sisters will miss her terribly, but yet know that where "Around the Throne of God in Heaven Thousands of children stand, she is now singing in the choir of Angels, happy evermore."

HEAVY ICE IN GULF

Extremely heavy ice is reported in the Gulf and it is thought that North Sydney may become impossible as a port of call for the Kyle at any moment now. The Canadian Ice-breaker Stanley, is jammed off St. Paul's Isld. having failed in an attempt to reach the Magdalen Islands with supplies.

FIRE ON SIEGNEUR OUT

SHIP SAILS TO-DAY.

The work of discharging the coal from the Canadian Siegneur was continued yesterday, and last evening the seat of the trouble was reached, and it is hoped to have the steamer ready for sea to-day.

The men who were engaged under the supervision of Mr. T. Kennedy, worked under great difficulties owing to the gas from the heated coal filling the holds. Only the coal in No 5 hold was affected, and the fire was located near the tunnel on the starboard side. In the meantime the work of reloading the pig iron that was discharged from the Siegneur before she went into Dry Dock is proceeding. This had been landed in the Foremast yard and was frozen in the ground and had to be dug out before it could be put on board.

The Siegneur's arrival here put many thousands of dollars in the pockets of local longshoremen while mechanics and others also profited, the job being the biggest to come here in many years.

PERSONAL

Sir M. P. Cashin, who has been on a business trip to the States, is returning by the Silvia, due here on Thursday.

Mr. J. P. Burke, Insurance Agent, is at present confined to his home, suffering from a broken arm the result of an accident sustained a few days ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Collishaw are leaving by the Sachem for St. Augustine, Florida, where they have spent the last few winters.

BELOW ZERO

The temperature in the City last night, was nearly as low as at any time for the season. Some glasses registered 2 below in town, while at points outside the city, it was 4 below zero.

SEIGNEUR IS RELOADING

All the damaged coal has now been discharged from the Canadian Siegneur at the Furness pier and the ship is today reloading the pig iron that was landed from her before she went on dock. Since coming here with her rudder gone the ship's repairs and expenses have amounted to a sum in the vicinity of $50,000.

WEST COAST FISHERY

A report from Sub-Collector Mills of Burgeo and LaPolla District to the Customs Dept. says the fishery prospects are good, there being a good sign of fish when weather is not too stormy for boats to get out. The fishing vessels have left for the West Coast grounds and report prospects good.

COLLEGE HOCKEY

The first game in the inter-collegiate hockey series will be played at the Prince's Rink on Saturday forenoon, the contestants being the Methodist College and Bishop Field teams. All three entries in the series are in good shape and a good fight should be put up for the cup. There are very few changes in the line-ups from last year.

Birth

On Sunday, Jan. 28th, to Mr. and Mrs. Leo Dillon, a William St., a son.

DEATH

KEAN—Little Phyllis, the 4 year old daughter of Capt. W. B. and Mrs. Evelyn Kean, died yesterday morning at 4 o'clock. Funeral today at 3 p.m.

ORDERED DEPORTED

Mary Josephine White, of St. John's, Nfld., the sixteen year old girl stowaway, who was taken off the steamer Belvedere by local immigration officers, has been ordered deported. For his part in attempting to assist the girl to enter this port, James Spruce, of Halifax, was recently sentenced to three months imprisonment.—Halifax Herald.

CANADIAN CURED BY EMILE COUE

RECOVERED USE OF ARMS AND LEGS BY AUTO-SUGGESTION

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—A patient who came from Canada to try the auto-suggestion treatment of Dr. Emile Coue was yesterday reported to be ready to return home practically cured. Those who have been witnessing the Coue clinic here declare the cure of the Canadian is the most remarkable feat the little French doctor has accomplished since his arrival in New York. The name of the patient is withheld as well as his place of residence. The only information those in charge of the clinic would give out was that the patient had come from Canada and was a former newspaper man.

Dr. Coue kept the Canadian with him after the public clinic Wednesday afternoon and worked with him in a private room. The man, it was said, was to all appearance an automaton, his joints stiff and almost useless, as a result of a gradually weakening nervous system.

"Hit me on the shoulder," Coue ordered.
The Canadian raised his right arm stiffly and brought his open palm down.
It was a sharp hard blow. Then he tried his left. He did it again and again at Coue's orders.
"Say 'I will'!" Coue kept ordering him.

Then he ran across the floor. First he walked, then at Coue's insistence, he ran, a stiff run, to be sure, but obviously more than he's done before in a long time. Though not yet middleaged, he ran like an old man.
Coue put him through other experiments. He made him write, an act that had been a matter of painful effort and productive of illegible scrawls a few days ago. To his own astonishment and delight and to his wife's almost tearful pleasure, he wrote "I am glad" with ordinary facility and speed.

"I congratulate you," Coue beamed. "You will get well. You are treating yourself correctly."

The man's wife declared that if her husband was not completely cured before Dr. Coue left New York they would follow him back to France.

SHIPPING NOTES

The Rosalind arrived at Halifax at 10 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The Silvia left Halifax at 10 o'clock this morning and is due here Thursday morning.

The Sabie I. sails tomorrow morning for St. Pierre thence to Halifax. Two passengers are booked to go by the ship from here, E. M. Greene and Jas. Darcy.

The schr. T. M. Nicholson is loading salt bulk fish at Rose Blanche for Buckport, Me.

SURVEY HELD ON CAPTO

The preliminary survey of the damages to the Norwegian steamer Capto, which was towed here on Sunday by the Sachem, was held yesterday forenoon. The damages to the ship, as was expected, are extensive and will mean that the steamer receives, besides a new rudder, practically a new stern. A report has been forwarded to the underwriters at New York, and further instructions regarding the ship's disposal are now awaited.

It is understood that enquiries were made as to the possibility of the Capto being towed to Louisburg, where her cargo is consigned, the ship being on time charter. In her present condition, however, and at this particular season, it is not likely that this will be attempted, and the repairs will be effected here, in which case the ship's cargo will have to be discharged.

SACHEM'S OUTWARD PASSENGERS

The Sachem sails for Halifax and Boston at noon Thursday, taking the following passengers:—Mrs. A. L. E. Schnrig, R. J. Murphy, Mrs. D. Baird, Master D. Baird, Miss K. Farrell, Miss A. Wovill, Miss E. Brammer, A. O'Brien, B. Spencer, J. Coaker, Geo. Hawes, J. Murphy, E. and Mrs. Conshaw.

FIRST ROUND IS COMPLETED

ST. BON'S VICTORIOUS.

In the cruelest exhibition of hockey for the season, St. Bon's last evening defeated the Terra Novas by 5 goals to 2.

The game did not start till 8:30 owing to the lights being out but the fans patiently held their places for the forty minutes delay. His Excellency the Governor and suite were again in attendance.

The contest was slow and ragged all through but from the first St. Bon's had the best of it and had they played up to form they must have given the Terra Novas the worst trimming of their experience. Muir, Phalen, Callahan, Fox and Halley did the scoring for St. Bon's while Canning secured both goals for the Terra Novas.

The game was refereed by Mr. Gus Herder.

The standing of the teams at the end of the first round is:

	P	W	L	F	A	Pts.
Guards	3	2	0	18	10	6
Feldmans	3	2	1	10	11	4
St. Bon's	3	1	2	10	10	4
Terra Novas	3	0	3	7	14	0
